This report is based on extensive research on child recruitment legislation, policy and practice in 196 countries. Its contents do not necessarily represent the views of the Coalition's Steering Committee member organizations, partners or funding bodies.

The report covers the period from April 2001 to March 2004. On the staff team, Victoria Forbes Adam was project manager and research coordinator. Enrique Restoy and Claudia Ricca were responsible for reviewing, editing and drafting material for Africa and Middle East, and the Americas and Pacific regions respectively. The introduction was written by International Coordinator Casey Kelso with contributions by the staff team and members of the Coalition steering committee. The report was edited by Sarah Pennington and copy edited by Maggie Maloney both of whom also reviewed the country entries. Coalition Regional Coordinators Henri Nzeyimana (Great Lakes of Central Africa), Glenda Ramirez (Southeast Asia), Andrés Vázquez (Latin America); and Karishma Budhdev-Lama (Middle East and North Africa network secretariat) provided information, comments and review from their regions. Secretariat Finance Manager Peter Coleman managed the budget and administration of funds.

Country entries for this report were researched and drafted by a team of consultants. They were: Alison Dilworth, Joanna Griffin, Lourdes Hernández-Martín, Charu Hogg, Catherine Hunter, Ewan Stein, Paul Tumelty and Emma Visman. Additional research and drafting was carried out by Chris Bjornestad, Gamze Goktas, Bill Hetherington, Jeanne Paik, Glenda Ramirez and Rightslink at Columbia University. Linda Dowdney, Kasper Jon Larsen and Paul Tumelty were also involved in reviewing, checking factual information and producing charts and statistical summaries.

I gratefully acknowledge the contribution of International Steering Committee member organizations, whose researchers and field officers provided invaluable comments and information throughout the research and writing process. They are: Amnesty International, Defence for Children International, Human Rights Watch, International Federation Terre des Hommes, International Save the Children Alliance, Jesuit Refugee Service, Quaker United Nations Office - Geneva, and World Vision International. I acknowledge in particular the long-standing commitment and support of Jo Becker, Rachel and Derek Brett, Martin Macpherson and Sarah Uppard.

Coalition members in Canada, Colombia, Spain, United Kingdom and USA researched and drafted country entries. Information was provided by national coalition members and partners in Bangladesh, Belgium, Brazil, Burundi, Democratic Republic of Congo, Ecuador, France, Indonesia, India, Israel and the Occupied Palestinian Territories, Jordan, Lebanon, Pakistan, Paraguay, Peru, Philippines, Nepal, New Zealand, Rwanda, Syria, Thailand, Uganda, United Kingdom, USA and Venezuela. I also gratefully acknowledge the contributions of many other organizations and individuals across all regions who contributed information to the report (for a full list of contributing organizations, see www.child-soldiers.org).

UNICEF staff at New York headquarters and in field offices around the world provided invaluable information, commentary and support throughout the duration of this project. A debt of gratitude is owed to field staff in Afghanistan, Burundi, Guinea, Indonesia, Niger, Panama, Somalia, Sri Lanka, Sudan, Thailand and Uganda.

For translations I would like to thank in particular Professor Veronika Dobrucki and her team of translators at Aconcagua University, Chile. French and Arabic translations were carried out by Olivier Jacoulet at JaComMédia and Mr Issa Zayed of the Satel Translation Centre respectively.

I thank the following for their invaluable support to the production process: Roland Algrant; George Dick and Nancy Heinonen at Four Colour Imports; Martyn Partridge and staff at Intertype; and Ben Erwin at PowerSimple. For photos we thank Victoria Ivleva-Yorke and others. Thanks also to Patrizia Scanella of Amnesty International, Kamela Usmani of Save the Children UK and to Theo Sowa.

The governments of Finland, Ireland and Switzerland provided financial support for the research, editing, distribution and launch of this report. The governments of Canada, France, Germany, Luxembourg, Netherlands, New Zealand and Sweden funded the Coalition's operations. Their support enabled the coalition's worldwide network to participate in the research process. The Diana Princess of Wales Memorial Trust, the Oak Foundation and Trocaire also supported this project.

This report is dedicated to children involved in armed conflict all over the world. We hope it will bring attention to their plight and contribute to ending the use of children as soldiers.
